CheapOair’s 10 Ways to Stay Green in the Travel Industry

Top Online Travel Agency Celebrates Earth Day by Encouraging Environmentally-Friendly Travel

NEW YORK – April 22, 2013 – CheapOair announces today its support of Earth Day, an international movement to protect the planet and secure a sustainable future. To help customers stay environmentally-friendly while away on vacation, CheapOair has compiled the following list of ways how airlines and travelers can stay eco-conscious.

- Virgin Atlantic, a leader in flights to popular worldwide destinations, has implemented a program offering a $25 million prize for greenhouse gas removal.
- Delta Air Lines has partnered with Nike to raise awareness of global warming. Each time a Nike employee flies with Delta, each company will donate money to various companies that help offset Co2 omissions.
- Southwest Airlines is a leader in paperless ticketing.
- American Airlines developed the Boeing 737-800, which burns 28% less fuel per mile than a standard Boeing aircraft.
- JetBlue and Continental (United Airlines) are in the process of developing a biodegradable fuel made of algae, waste residues and non-edible corn plants.

This year, CheapOair encourages all customers to participate in green travel by engaging in one or all of the following environmentally-friendly ways to travel:

- Book nonstop flights when possible.
- Download CheapOair’s mobile app to access boarding passes without printing.
- Pack lightly to decrease use of laundry appliances post-trip.
- Bring your own toiletries when possible.
- Use public transportation to get around your destination city.
